Issue

This motion seeks to dissolve the Internal Regulations of Sustainability and Operations. This follows the dissolution of the Vice-President (Sustainability & Operations) role, which has made the Internal Regulations unnecessary.

Background and Rationale

The 2025 Winter Referendum passed a question that removed the Vice-President (Sustainability & Operations) role from the Constitution. The Internal Regulations of Sustainability & Operations (henceforth IR S&O) was built to accompany this Executive Office position. Without the corresponding position, much of the IR S&O is outdated or irrelevant. Additionally, the SSMU has a Sustainability Policy that outlines the mandates, responsibilities and procedures related to Sustainability, so the information in the IR S&O is either repetitive or no longer relevant.

Alignment with Mission

This motion allows SSMU documents to stay up to date considering the recent changes in SSMU. It will also enable SSMU to better fulfill its mission of providing services to students by reducing the amount of conflicting or outdated information.

Risk Factors and Resource Implications

Concern of lost information:

SSMU is currently in the process of creating several documents that encompass SSMU operations, which will be passed as Protocols upon completion. While these documents are not being presented in conjunction with this motion, the operational procedures exist within internal documents and are being followed already.

Additionally, the Sustainability Policy encompasses the important tenets of the IR S&O, so this information will not be lost.

Finally, the Governance department retains copies of all archived documents and will provide them upon request to Students and Staff as necessary.

Concern of referring to the Board of Directors rather than Legislative Council:

Many of the responsibilities and procedures outlined in the IR S&O have been redistributed or altered, making the document incredibly outdated. This demands urgency to ensure the Governing Documents are well written, clear, and avoids redundancy.
